

The Norfolk Cloister

A stunning 14th century monastery cloister which, after the Reformation, was made into a garden gallery by the Duke of Norfolk. Much later, when the Charterhouse was still home to hundreds of schoolboys, this striking space can lay claim to the creation of football's 'offside' rule.

A stone flag floor and original features include an original doorway leading to one of the Carthusian monk's cells. With its serene atmosphere the cloister is ideal for corporate events, dinners and wine tastings.
